This picture shows an organic cotton towel called "Wabofu" - which does not require soap or detergent, hence it is environmentally friendly. Unlike normal cloth, it is much softer, yet rough on the surface as the direction of fibers are irregular. The rugged irregular surface is effective for removing dirt to keep kitchen and utensils clean.

This report uses 100% recycled paper. As for printing, soybean ink was used. Soybean ink is biodegradable and easily removable, facilitating recycling of the printed matter.
